The ideology and political system in South Africa were formed by apartheid, which separated and developed the different racial groups to live separately and develop along tribal lines to decrease their numbers. "Apartness" made it unlikely that any further to challenge or overthrow the system, and one invited imprisonment. Go any further to challenge or overthrow the system, and one invited imprisonment.

Apartheid also ensured Jews benefited from being part of a privileged white minority that dominated the society. Martin Kagan left South Africa in 1971. When the nationalists came to power in 1948, they basically took a system in which people were divided along tribal lines to decrease their numbers. Thus, apartheid tended to reinforce a Jewish community that retained a strong sense of its social distinctiveness and separateness.

Apartheid also ensured Jews benefited from being part of a privileged white minority that dominated the society.

Martin Kagan left South Africa in 1971. When the nationalists came to power in 1948, they basically took a system in which people were divided along tribal lines to decrease their numbers. Thus, apartheid tended to reinforce a Jewish community that retained a strong sense of its social distinctiveness and separateness.

Apartheid also ensured Jews benefited from being part of a privileged white minority that dominated the society.

Martin Kagan left South Africa in 1971. When the nationalists came to power in 1948, they basically took a system in which people were divided along tribal lines to decrease their numbers. Thus, apartheid tended to reinforce a Jewish community that retained a strong sense of its social distinctiveness and separateness.

Apartheid also ensured Jews benefited from being part of a privileged white minority that dominated the society. Martin Kagan left South Africa in 1971. When the nationalists came to power in 1948, they basically took a system in which people were divided along tribal lines to decrease their numbers. Thus, apartheid tended to reinforce a Jewish community that retained a strong sense of its social distinctiveness and separateness.

Apartheid also ensured Jews benefited from being part of a privileged white minority that dominated the society. Martin Kagan left South Africa in 1971. When the nationalists came to power in 1948, they basically took a system in which people were divided along tribal lines to decrease their numbers. Thus, apartheid tended to reinforce a Jewish community that retained a strong sense of its social distinctiveness and separateness.

Apartheid also ensured Jews benefited from being part of a privileged white minority that dominated the society.